

MIXED BAG FOR PUBS, HOTELS AND LEISURE SECTOR

The smaller end of the hotel market particularly B&B's and guest houses has seen outlet numbers decline whilst there has been substantial growth in the number of the largest hotels – especially those with over 200 rooms.

This sector is now worth over £700 million for frozen and has enjoyed 3.7% value growth over the three years of the data provided.

The pub sector has done better than either hotels or leisure and has seen food purchases grow by 4.8% to just under £500 million in 2007.

The data only covers a small part of the period since the ban on smoking in public places with England introducing the legislation on 1st July 2007 whilst Scotland had gone a year earlier.

- Pubs, hotels and leisure outlets are united by the fact that serving food is not their prime business focus. Pubs serve alcohol, Hotels provide accommodation and so on.
- The 118,000 or so outlets in this category account for almost half - 44% - of all foodservice outlets
- Numbers are falling - principally in the hotel sector where a large number of small establishments - B&Bs, guesthouses and the like - have been closing down.
- There has been substantial growth in largest hotels - especially those with over 200 rooms.

- Numbers of meals increased by 4% between 2004 and 2007
- Pub meals, at 5.2%, accounted for the largest proportionate growth; in fact, the pub sector did even better after including Pub Restaurants which are covered separately in the Restaurant sector
- Hotels continued to see a revival in their business following the downturn associated with falling visitors numbers after SARS and 9/11
